DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house was built in four parts, the older two units sandwiched between two 1952-vintage sections. The sections are attached in tandem and face northwards.

The western section

This is L-shaped and two story, with frame siding. It measures three bays by two with 6 X 6 windows. Small attic louvers are inserted in the gable ends of each leg of the "L". A door is located on the northern side near the eastern extreme and another is along the southern exposure. The roof is an asphalt gable-front with box cornice trim. An interior brick chimney is sited on the roof, near the seam where the two legs of the "L" meet.

The stone section

This is two-storied, with walls of coursed stone with quoined corners. Two belt courses run around these walls as well. This unit is three openings across and two deep, with 6 X 6 window sashes. Opposite doors are on the northern and southern exposures and are nine-pane, with two-light transoms. A one-bay shelter covers the northern portal. The roof is slate-gable flank with very little underlying trim at all. A brick flue is sited on the eastern inside-end of this portion of the dwelling.

The log unit

Again, this is attached to the western end of the stone house. It is one and one-half stories, with walls of stucco-covered logs, resting over a stone cellar. The bays measure two by two and the window sashes are 9 X 6. A doorway, with a four-pane transom, is located on the northern facade. A screened-in porch, quite recent in construction, has been added to the northern aspect of this unit. It is probable that the roof was raised, for the gabled dormers are inset within the slope of the gable-flank slate roof. They have 3 X 6 window sashes. There are two brick inside-end chimneys on the eastern and western extremes, the eastern one having been replaced.

The kitchen

This addition was constructed at the same time as the L-shaped wing. It is composed of frame siding and is one bay by two with 6 X 6 windows. A ground-level entryway is located on the southern extreme. The roof is an asphalt gable-flank.

The interior

The log section contains both chair rails and exposed beaded beams and wall trim. Brick fireplaces are located at either end, and a circular stairwell is positioned in the northwest corner of the house. The stone section has the original flooring, cherry banisters and original hardware. A thru-hall connects the doors and a fireplace is built into the far western wall. The cellar under the log unit was the original kitchen, and it still retains the old log beams and a covered over hearth.

An old stone tenant house once stood on the property, but this has since been razed.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The farm on which this house is located has also been known by the name of Evergreen. Part of it includes a very old section of a tract called Hall's Rich Neck, patented in 1699 by Thomas Hall. In 1748, Col. Thomas White purchased 510 acres of this tract. The 1783 Tax List gives the following divisions of the tracts that probably are encompassed by this farm:

Margaret's Mount

William Wilson 140 acres
Freeborn Brown 120 acres
Samuel Bailus 200 acres
William Cox 100 acres
Richard Hawkins 72 acres

Hall's Rich Neck

Thomas Hall, Jr. 652 acres
James Clark 35 acres

Windmill Hill

Thomas Hall, Jr. 100 acres

The oldest part of the structure, the log section, was built in the late 1700's, according to the Federal Tax List, and could have been constructed by either Wilson, Hawkins or Hall from the previous list. The stone section is peculiar to a style that would put it in the 1830-1860 bracket. This further improvement might have occurred under it's ownership by the Stumps. The 1878 Martenet Map lists the owner as being William Hopkins, although he did not obtain the land until 1883.

Bliss Tenant House

Harmony Church Road

The concept of building into a hillside is common in this county and should be considered an important regional characteristic. This small stone tenant house is such an example and it further exemplifies the common plan of a double entrance which many associate with Germanic influence.

EXTERIOR:

The dwelling faces south; it is a three level stone bank-house standing about ten yards north of Harmony Church Road. It is not large; being only four short bays wide and one wide bay deep with measurements of 24' along the south (main) facade and 18' in depth.

The fenestration is symmetrical although not regular. On the main level for instance the principal facade (south) is vented by a 6/6 sash window in the outer two bays and doorways in the inner bays. The east and west bays are blind and in its original state the north side was opened up by two windows directly opposite those of the south wall.

The walls are made of brownish fieldstone (gneiss) and appear to have never had any exterior covering except of the south facade where evidence of whitewash suggests an earlier and larger single story porch.

The roof, which may not be original, has gable-ends with its ridge running east to west.

There are corbelled brick chimney caps on each end having the appearance of serving interior chimneys. The west cap is decorative; however, there is no fireplace chimney on that end. At attic level it can be noticed that the stone wall below the cap is hollow, for some as yet unexplained reason, but there is no evidence of smoke within. On the other end, however, there is a chimney 3'4" wide that projects into the rooms 2' and served fireplaces on each level.

The east door of the main facade has been blocked in, the porch replaced and a recent three level frame addition that wraps around the east and north sides alter the original exterior.

INTERIOR:

At least two major renovations have altered the interior in its original state. The three level plan provides for a kitchen in the bottom level, a living space above and a bedroom above that. The attic is finished with plaster and is accessible by stairs like those of the other levels.

Basement:

While there is evidence of a double entrance on the south facade and evidently the house was once used as a duplex, the first level suggests that this was originally a single family dwelling with a basement kitchen. It is the north facade of this level that provides the many other entrances to the building and this is a single door located in the western most bay.

In the room one sees a single stone fireplace at the east end of the room. It is a fairly large fireplace with a 45" square opening. It is lighted by a window near the fireplace in the north wall and only one other window in the middle of the west wall. These windows have the same heavy lintels of the other openings and it should be noted that if this building was a duplex having a fireplace at each end, this window could not have existed.

There is evidence of an earlier door behind the present stairs in the northeast corner. Its lintel; however, was a hewn 3"x51" jack-arch and not the heavy stone seen elsewhere in the house and therefore may be considered an early alteration. Its presence does raise a question about the history of the present stairs while these stairs are modern, their placement seems original (based on the two stories above) however, the closed-off door in

SPECIFIC DATES

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The full gamut of 19th Century American architectural style is represented in this area as well as a considerable number of 18 Century buildings. While the physical characteristics of this environment are valuable, literally, as being part of the ever-disappearing original American fabric it should not be overlooked that structures such as this are an integral part of an historic landscape of which this county should be possessive. Every demolition of a pre-modern farm building represents a loss of the kind of visual document necessary for the as yet incomplete history of a traditionally apparent culture.

A tenant house such as this one being built out of local materials and utilizing a plan peculiar to the topography says a good deal about past life in this area. It is a positive contribution to the picturesque character of Deer Creek.

The concept of building into a hillside site and placing the kitchen in the basement the building is common in this county and should be considered an important regional characteristic.

This small stone tenant house is such an example and it further exemplifies the common plan of a double entrance which many associate with Germanic influence.

BLISS TENANT HOUSE
HA-157

this location suggests that for one period the stairs at least had a different direction if not another location.

With the floors having been replaced it is difficult to tell if the original ceiling although other buildings in the area suggest that it might have had exposed joists and been whitewashed like the walls. The present ceiling height is 7'2".

2ND LEVEL:

This level was and is the main living area. The double entrance and evidence of a partition since the floor was replaced suggest that there may have been a transverse wall dividing the area in half. The custom of a segregated formal parlor is seen in this area.

UPPER LEVEL:

Enclosed windows lead to the second level and provide for closet space. There was a single bedroom upstairs reflecting the same layout and fenestration as below including windows in the northeast corner to the attic.

In the attic one sees that the gable ends were plastered and painted but the roof framing has been left exposed. The floors are 13" random width laid with cut nails. The rafters are a mixture of sawn and hewn materials with many being undressed walnut tree rafters. These are banded at the ridge and fixed both there and at the joist ends with cut nails.

The area was lighted by pairs of casement windows at each end.

HISTORY:

The examination of maps, deeds, wills, etc. is not as fruitful for this building as it is in most cases. Even though its plan, materials and construction techniques suggest a building that is surviving from at least the 1870's (if not much earlier) it fails to appear in the standard sources. This building is not indicated by either the Jennings & Herrick Map of 1858 or the Martenet Map of 1878. In fact, it is not represented by even the latest U.S.G.S. Map. Furthermore, the title search for this parcel suggests that it has been a part of HA-156 (Cedar Hill or Evergreen) at least since the early 19th Century, but the presence of a building is never indicated by the records.

What is known is that ownership dates back to the Stump family in the 1880's, a period in which the building was surely standing. Stump ownership is continuous from that time until willed back into the Federal era. Deed HD Z/323 & 4 (September 19, 1816) shows Thomas C. Stump acquiring two acres of "Duckets Stump" adjoining Wm. Worthington and "The River" (Susquehanna?) at this time. A check of Thomas C. Stump as grantee for 1816-1840's shows many transactions including almost as many cases of him being the grantor. Many, if not all of these transactions however, are in the Deer Creek area and establish the presence of Stumps from an early date. Most curious among these dealings is the reference acquired by chain of title to HD 23/356 (October 14, 1839) in which Thomas C. Stump acquires via public sale 90 Acres on the south side of Deer Creek. Deed 15/131 (December 1863), suggests that the land "on the road from Govers Mills to Windmill Hill" was inherited from Thomas C. Stump by his children. It can only be concluded that if this building predates the Civil War (which it most likely does) that it is of the "Stump" era. Thomas C. Stump left no will. The inventory of his estate lists slaves, a large number of household articles, but no mention of real estate.

We have a building here that is typical in plan and construction in Harford County prior to the Civil War which stands on land owned by Stumps. This fact is not presented in an effort to reinforce any hierarchy of names so much as it helps to demonstrate how certain areas of
